

BULGARIA

Government 1.

Following legislative elections on October 13, 1991, minority SDS government with Philip Dimitrov (SDS) as PM formed November 8, 1991 (MRFH 2004, 878; Banks et al.2006, Keesings). Government supported from the legislature by DPS (SDS and DPS as legislative coalition, though DPS not formally part of the government) (Crampton 2005, 219; Bugajski 2002, 789; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007; Giatzidis 2002, 67). Government ends October 28, 1992, when the government was defeated on a no-confidence vote and resigned (Keesings).¹

Government 2.

December 30, 1992, Berov's government was approved by parliament (Banks et al. 2006). "Formally, it was an expert government not tied to any political party" (Karasimeonov 1996, 49). The "technocratic government" was supported by the BSP and DPS (Giatzidis 2002, 68). See also Bugajski 2002, 779,789; Karasimeonov 1995; Crampton 2005, 224; Tanchev 1998, 76. September 2, 1994, Berov government resigns (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006)

October ~~11~~ 17, 1994, caretaker government installed under Reneta Indzhova (Keesings; Bugajski 2002, 779). [See http://www.ipu.org/parline-e/reports/arc/2045_94.htm] [Not included in data table in paper.] December 18, 1994, early National Assembly elections. (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 3.

January 25, 1995, new government installed, with Zhan Videnov (BSP) as PM (Keesings; Crampton 1995). This was based an electoral coalition (joint list) of the BPS, BZNS-AS, and PKE (Ball 1998, 330; Bugajski 2002, 789; Crampton 2005; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007; Koulov 1998, 147; Melone 1998, 207). December 28, 1996, National Assembly accepts Videnov's resignation (Keesings; Banks et al., 2006; Wyzan 1998, 113). Note that many sources list December 21, 1996, but this is the date on which Videnov's resignation was offered, rather than the date on which it was accepted.

February 12, 1997, interim government appointed, led by Stefan Sofianski. . [Not included in data table in paper.] April 19, 1997, National Assembly elections. (Keesings; Banks et al., 2006)

Government 4.

May 21, 1997, new single-party government takes office with Ivan Kostov (SDS) as PM. (Banks et al. 2006, Crampton 1997). Government (ODS) is based on a joint list of SDS, BSDP, and the Popular Union (NS). Which parties comprised the ODS coalition is difficult to discern; different sources have different lists. Here we follow Crampton (1997, 561).² See also Crampton 2005,

² Crampton describes the coalition as follows: "The ODS, formed in 1996, consisted of the Union of Democratic Forces (SDS), the Bulgarian Social Democratic Party (BSDP), the mainly Turkish Movement for Rights and Freedom (DPS), and the Popular Union (NS). The most powerful force in the ODS was the SDS. Until February 1997 the SDS had been a loose alliance of 15 member organisations, not all of which were political parties. At the SDS's ninth National Conference, on 15 and 16 February, it was decided to transform the alliance into a political party, to be headed by a 235; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 107-8. Government ends with legislative elections held on June 17, 2001 (Keesings, Banks et al. 2006).

Government 5.

Minimal winning coalition government comprising NDS and DPS forms on July 24, 2001, with Simeon Saksoburggotski (NDS) as PM (Keesings, Harper 2003). On March 10, 2004, government drops to minority status when several NDS legislators leave the party to form a new party called New Time (Banks et al. 2006; Bulgarian National Assembly website, www.parliament.bg). Government ends February 21, 2005, with voluntary enlargement as the New Time Party joins the cabinet (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 6.

Minimal winning coalition government comprising NDS, DPS, and NTP takes office on February 22, 2005, with Simeon Saksoburggotski (NDS) as PM (Keesings, Banks et al. 2006). Government ends with legislative elections on June 25, 2005 (Keesings, Banks et al. 2006).

Government 7.

BSP PM Sergei Stanishev's government coalition (BSP, NDS, and DPS) sworn in on August 16, 2005. (Keesings; Spirova 2006, 620; Spirova 2008, 904.). As of December 31, 2008, this government was still in office.

new 11-member National Executive Committee. There were to be common candidates for the election and those candidates were to be chosen in primary elections. This created some tension. The Popular Union (NS) feared that its candidates would not make it past the primary election hurdle and it took a month of hard negotiation before a compromise could be reached; a little later the DPS decided it would not campaign within the SDS." (emphasis ours).

CROATIA

Government 1.

September 8, 1992, new single-party majority (HDZ) government takes office with Hrvoje Sarinic (HDZ) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006) following legislative elections on August 2, 1992. The government ends March 29, 1993 when the Sarinic government resigns (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 2.

April 3, 1993, new single-party majority HDZ government takes office with Nikica Valentinc (HDZ) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). The government ends October 29, 1995 when legislative elections are held (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 3.

November 7, 1995, new single-party majority HDZ government takes office with Zlatko Matesa (HDZ) as PM (Banks et al. 2006). The government ends January 3, 2000 when legislative elections are held (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Bartlett 2003, 57 fn. 52; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 216).

Government 4.

January 27, 2000, new six-party surplus coalition government takes office with Ivica Racan (SPDH) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). The government, based on a pre-electoral coalition, comprises SPDH, HSLS, IDS, HSS, HNS, LS (Bartlett 2003, 57; Fisher 2006). The government ends June 4, 2001, due to a change in the party composition of the government, when the IDS leaves government (Keesings; Bartlett 2003, 60; Fisher 2006, 184; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 220).

[In July 2001, the four HSLS ministers resign from government, which would have deprived the government of its majority, but then the deputy PM from the HSLS changed his mind and remained in government (Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 221). Thus we are not counting this as a new compositional change in government.]

Government 5.

The remaining five parties in the surplus coalition government (SPDH, HSLS, HSS, HNS, LS) continue on, with Ivica Racan (SPDH) as PM, governing from June 5, 2001 (the day following the cabinet's compositional change) until July 5, 2002 when the government resigns following some intra-party conflicts within the government (caused by the HSLS, which then splits) (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Fisher 2006, 185; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 222).

Government 6.

July 30, 2002, new minority coalition (Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 222) government takes office with Ivica Racan (SPDH) reassuming his post as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). The government now comprises SPDH, HSS, HNS, LS, and Libra (consisting of a portion of the old HSLs party) (Bartlett 2003, 57; Fisher 2006, 185). The government ends November 23, 2003 when legislative elections are held (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 224).

Government 7.

December 23, 2003, new minority coalition government (HDZ and DC) takes office with Ivo Sanader (HDZ) reassuming his post as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Bideleux & Jeffries 2007, 225). The government ends February 10, 2006 due to a change in party composition when the sole DC minister leaves the coalition and joins the opposition (Reuters (<http://www.redorbit.com/news/display/?id=385732>); The Economist, 08/07/07).

Government 8.

The HDZ continues in office as a single-party minority government with Ivo Sanader (HDZ) as PM, governing from February 11, 2006 (the day following the cabinet's compositional change) until November 25, 2007 when legislative elections are held (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 9.

January 12, 2008, new coalition government takes office with office with Ivo Sanader (HDZ) as PM (Reuters). Coalition comprises HDZ, HSS, HSLs and SDSS (US Department of State country studies, <http://www.state.gov/r/pa/ei/bgn/3166.htm>; Australian Government Department of Foreign Affairs & Trade Croatia Country Briefing, http://www.dfat.gov.au/geo/croatia/croatia_brief.html; Miljenko and Gruičić 2008, 755). This government was in office as of December 31, 2008.

CZECH REPUBLIC

Government 1.

January 1, 1993, is the official ‘birth’ of the Czech Republic following the dissolution of the federation (Czechoslovakia) of the Czech and Slovak republics. The new Czech government that takes office is identical to the one previously holding office in the Czech Republic following elections on June 6, 1992 (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). Vaclav Klaus (ODS) remains as PM and the majority coalition government consists of the ODS, KDU/CSL, and ODA (Kopecký 2001, 108-9, fn8; Deegan-Krause 2006, 61). The government ends June 1, 1996 when legislative elections are held (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 2.

July 5, 1996 (Keesings), minority coalition government forms with same three parties (ODS, KDU/CSL, and ODA) and Klaus still as PM (Brokl and Mansfeldová 1997). Government ends on November 30, 1997 when Klaus resigns following the withdrawal of the two junior coalition partners (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Klaus agrees to stay on in an unofficial caretaker capacity. December 17, 1997, the president (Havel) invites Josef Tošovský to form a caretaker government. January 2, 1998, Tošovský government takes office. [Not included in data table in paper.] June 20, 1998, National Assembly elections (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 3.

July 22, 1998, new minority single-party CSSD government appointed; Miloš Zeman (CSSD) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Brokl and Mansfeldová 1997). This government last until June 15, 2002, when (the second day of) legislative elections are held.

Government 4.

July 15, 2002, new coalition government, comprising CSSD, KDU/CSL, and US, takes office with Vladimír Špidla (CSSD) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006; Kopecký 2006, 129). Government ends July 1, 2004, when the resignation of PM Špidla is accepted (Keesings). He is succeeded by Stanislav Gross.

Government 5.

August 4, 2004, a new coalition government, comprising CSSD, KDU/CSL, and US, takes office with Stanislav Gross (CSSD) as PM (Keesings). The government ends on March 30, 2005, when the KDU/CSL withdraws from the cabinet (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

Government 6.

The CSSD and US continue in office as a minority coalition government with Stanislav Gross as PM, governing from March 31, 2005 (the day following the cabinet’s compositional change) until April 25, 2005 when the resignation of the PM (and thereby the cabinet) took effect (Linek 2006; Keesings; Banks et al. 2006).

On-line Appendix

Government 7.

A new minimal winning coalition cabinet, with the same party composition as the initial Gross cabinet (CSSD, KDU/CSL and US) and new PM, Jiří Paroubek (CSSD), is immediately appointed, taking office April 26, 2005 (the day following the previous cabinet's resignation) (Linek 2006; Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). [The resignation and new cabinet appointment are listed in Linek 2006 as occurring on the same day, but as is the case with other 'immediate' changes in cabinet composition etc., we record the events as occurring on successive dates.] This government last until June 3, 2006, when (the second day of) legislative elections are held.

Government 8.

A new single-party minority government comprising ODS and unaffiliated (non-party) ministers is formally appointed by the president, with Mirek Topolánek (ODS) as PM, on September 4, 2006 (Keesings; Linek 2006). This government fails a confidence (investiture) vote on October 4, 2006 (Keesings).

Government 9.

On January 9, 2007, a three-party minority coalition comprising the ODS, KDU/CSL and SZ parties, with Mirek Topolánek (ODS) as PM, is formally appointed by the president (Keesings). This government was in office as of December 31, 2008.

ESTONIA

Government 1.

Legislative elections held September 20, 1992. October 21, 1992, new government forms with Mart Laar (EKDL) as PM (Keesings; Banks et al. 2006). The minimal winning coalition government comprises I (the Isamaa electoral alliance of five parties), M (the Moderates, an electoral alliance of 2 parties that merges into a single party in 1996), and the ERSP (Bugajski 2002; Keesings; Arter 1996). Government ends when a no confidence vote passes on September 26, 1994 (Banks et al. 2006).

The Laar government was followed by a caretaker government, with largely the same cabinet composition, led by Andres Tarand (previously the minister of the environment and a member of the Green movement) (Taagapera 1995).
