

1 Dataset : pec_BJPS.dta (or pec_BJPS.xls)

1.1 Variables in initial dataset

COUNTRYNAME

Names of 20 countries used in analysis.

COUNTRY

Unique number identifying each country.

ELECTION

The date of each legislative election held between 1946 and 1998, in the form year month day. (So 461126 is November 26, 1946.) Only democratic elections were used. The Przeworski et al. (2000) dataset was used to determine whether a country was democratic or not for each post-war election. Election dates are taken from Mackie & Rose (1991) as well as Muller & Strom (2000) and Budge et al. (2001).

PEC

Dummy variable that is coded one if the two parties in the dyad (PARTY1 and PARTY2) formed a pre-electoral coalition prior to an election; coded 0 otherwise. There did not have to be a written coalition agreement for there to be a pre-electoral coalition. However, at a minimum, there had to be a clear and publicly-stated intention on the part of participating parties to cooperate following the election if they won enough support at the polls to form a government. Information as to whether a pre-electoral coalition existed came from a variety of country-specific sources and correspondence with several country experts. See Appendix 1 for list of sources.

PARTY1

First party in dyad. See Appendix 2 for names of parties.

PARTY2

Second party in dyad. See Appendix 2 for names of parties.

THRESHOLD

The effective electoral threshold. The effective threshold is the mean of the thresholds of representation and exclusion. It is calculated as $\frac{50\%}{M+1} + \frac{50\%}{2M}$, where M is the district magnitude. If there are legal thresholds and/or upper tier seats, the calculation is slightly more complicated (Lijphart 1994, 25-30). For more information on electoral thresholds, see Taagepera (1998a, 1998b).

INCOMPATIBILITY

Measures the absolute ideological distance between the parties in the dyad and is a proxy for the lack of ideological compatibility in the coalition. Data on the ideological position of each party are taken from the Manifesto Research Group, which evaluates each party on a one-dimensional scale that ranges from -100 (extreme left) to +100 (extreme right) (Budge et al. 2001).

POLARIZATION

Measures the ideological polarization in the party system and is calculated as the absolute ideological distance between the largest left and right wing party in the party system. Data on the ideological position of each party are taken from the Manifesto Research Group, which evaluates each party on a one-dimensional scale that ranges from -100 (extreme left) to +100 (extreme right) (Budge et al. 2001).

SEATSHARE1

The proportion of seats won by the first party in a dyad (PARTY1) in the current election. Data from Budge et al. (2001).

SEATSHARE2

The proportion of seats won by the second party in a dyad (PARTY1) in the current election. Data from Budge et al. (2001).

SEATLAG1

The proportion of seats won by the first party in the dyad (PARTY1) in the previous election.

SEATLAG2

The proportion of seats won by the second party in the dyad (PARTY2) in the previous election.

IDENT

Unique identifying number for each election (created by multiplying the country number by 100,000,000 and adding it to the election date). Note that Excel doesn't handle numbers this size well, so if using the pec_BJPS.xls file, it would be best to create a unique identifying number some other way.

1.2 Variables created when running the “pec_BJPS.do” file

COALITIONSEATLAG

The proportion of seats won by the potential coalition (dyad) in the previous election. Variable constructed by adding SEATLAG1 and SEATLAG2.

SEATSHARE

The percentage of seats won by the potential coalition (dyad) in the previous election. Variable constructed by multiplying COALITIONSEATLAG \times 100. Thus if a dyad won four tenths of the seats (COALITIONSEATLAG = 0.4), its SEATSHARE would be 40 percent. This variable represents the expected seat share of the potential coalition in the current election.

SEATSHARE_2

SEATSHARE squared.

POLARIZATION_THRESHOLD

Interaction term created by multiplying POLARIZATION \times THRESHOLD.

ASYMMETRY

This is the ratio of the seat share of the two parties in a dyad (PARTY1 and PARTY2). It is calculated as:

$$ASYMMETRY = \begin{cases} \frac{SEATLAG1}{SEATLAG1+SEATLAG2} & \text{if } \frac{SEATLAG1}{SEATLAG1+SEATLAG2} \geq 0.5 \\ 1 - \frac{SEATLAG1}{SEATLAG1+SEATLAG2} & \text{if } \frac{SEATLAG1}{SEATLAG1+SEATLAG2} < 0.5 \end{cases}$$

ASYM_SEAT

Interaction term created by multiplying ASYMMETRY \times SEATSHARE.
